

Chemical products

Selling & using

Your guide to selling and using chemical products

What you need to know

Selling chemical products responsibly

Whilst sold for legitimate uses, products containing certain chemicals can also be misused for criminal purposes. The Home Office has provided advice to help you prevent serious crimes, as well as fulfil your legal obligations.

Download the leaflet here

Supplying explosives precursors and poisons

Members of the public who want to acquire, import, possess or use these chemicals must hold a license issued by the Home Office and an associated photographic identity document.

Find out more information here

Licensed transactions for explosives precursors

If a customer requests to purchase a regulated explosives precursor above a certain concentration Gov.co.uk states that they must be asked for their license and associated photographic ID.

Download more information here

Responsible rodenticide use

Dr Alan Buckle, CRRU UK Chairman states "We have to get smarter in the way we use rodenticides - and show we are doing so."

Download useful resources here

Professional standard poison use

Rules brought in in 2016 require Farmers to hold a Certificate of Competence in respect of using professional standard poison, however being apart of a farm assurance scheme can be sufficient evidence. This is a useful download for BAGMA members.

Download more information here